JO HAMILTON

Interior designer, presenter, public speaker and design commentator

Jo is regularly listed among the UK's leading interior designers, noted for her confident grasp of colour, intelligent use of space and luxury aesthetic. She is the creative director at Jo Hamilton Interiors and her reputation within the industry has seen her appointed a judge for both the What House? Awards and International Property Awards, where she is also a key speaker.

Jo is a show ambassador for House Ireland and Index Dubai (luxury interior design exhibitions) and was the long-term resident interior designer for Grand Designs Live. Her television credits include Sky's Who'd Be A Millionaire and ITV's 60-Minute Makeover.

Jo has run her own high-end interior design company for more than 20 years, listing high net worth individuals from across the globe as well as celebrities among her many clients. Media outlets including The Independent, Daily Telegraph, BBC, Metro, Irish Independent, Country & Town House and Elite Monde (UAE), among others, have featured Jo and she is often asked for comment on design issues by newspapers, magazines, websites and blogs.

Jo's interior design commissions have ranged from exclusive City apartments to stylish country retreats, from sleek bars, clubs and restaurants to stunning hotels, offices and homes. In addition to her commissioned work, Jo runs interior design courses underpinned by her firm belief that by understanding a few key principles, even the least confident and experienced person can create designs that work.
