SARA LAWRENCE

Sara Lawrence worked as a staff writer at The Times and the Daily Mail before Faber&Faber published her first novel, HIGH JINX, about bad girls at boarding school in 2007. It was published by Penguin in the USA. The sequel, JINXED, was published in both territories in 2009. An independent production company is currently developing High Jinx as a television series. She now works as a freelance journalist, writing travel features for BA's High Life magazine, the Independent and the Daily Mail and general features for all sorts of people. She has a chick lit review column in the Daily Mail's books pages. Sara is working on her third novel, something completely different this time, and also co-presenting a TV pilot about food and travel this autumn.
